11. Read the following passage and answer the question: Major roads in the area include the A 1 (Gateshead Newcastle Western Bypass), stretching north to Edinburgh and south to London; the A 19 heading south past Sunderland and Middlesbrough to York and Doncaster; the A 69 heading west to Carlisle; the A 696, which becomes the A 68 heads past Newcastle Airport and up through central Northumberland and central Scottish Borders, the A 167, the old "Great North Road", heading south to Gateshead, Chester-le-Street, Durham and Darlington; and the A 1058 "Coast Road", which runs from Jesmond to the east coast between Tynemouth and Cullercoats. Many of these designations are recent-upon completion of the Western Bypass, and its designation as the new line of the A 1, the roads between this and the A 1's former alignment through the Tyne Tunnel were re... Question: What major Newcastle road stretches from Edinburgh to London?

12. Read the following passage and answer the question: The United States Mint produces Proof Sets specifically for collectors and speculators. Silver Proofs tend to be the standard designs but with the dime, quarter, and half dollar containing 90% silver. Starting in 1983 and ending in 1997, the Mint also produced proof sets containing the year's commemorative coins alongside the regular coins. Another type of proof set is the Presidential Dollar Proof Set where four special $1 coins are minted each year featuring a president. Because of budget constraints and increasing stockpiles of these relatively unpopular coins, the production of new Presidential dollar coins for circulation was suspended on December 13, 2011, by U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy F. Geithner. Future minting of such coins will be made solely for collectors. Question: When was the production of Presidential dollar coins suspended?
