

Multiple Choice (10 marks)

1. A baby born with pulmonary hypoplasia secondary to oligohydramnios caused by renal agenesis would be classified as having:
 - (a) an association.
 - (b) a dysplasia.
 - (c) a sequence.
 - (d) a syndrome.
2. The largest Latino community in the U.S. is:
 - (a) Puerto Rican
 - (b) Mexican
 - (c) Cuban
 - (d) Brazilian
3. Which of the following is not a familial cancer syndrome
 - (a) Familial adenomatous polyposis
 - (b) Li-Fraumeni syndrome
 - (c) Von Hippel-Lindau syndrome
 - (d) Waardenburg syndrome
4. One difference that seems to be mostly cohort rather than age is the difference in _____ for different age groups
 - (a) Coping strategies
 - (b) Work productivity
 - (c) Rates of dementia
 - (d) Personality traits
5. Most surveillance systems use which of the following study designs?
 - (a) Cohort
 - (b) Serial cross-sectional
 - (c) Mortality
 - (d) Syndromic

True / False (10 marks)

Answer True or False

6. True or False: We are attracted to individuals with similar attitudes because their agreement reinforces our beliefs and fosters positive interactions.
7. True or False: The needle for an inferior alveolar nerve block ideally passes posterior and medial to the medial pterygoid muscle.
8. True or False: The seventh right intercostal space in the mid-axillary line overlies the lower lobe of the lung.
9. True or False: The Old Testament presents sexuality as fundamentally positive and considers its social consequences.
10. True or False: Working in a category IV laboratory is the biggest risk factor for infection with Ebola.

Long Form Response (20 marks)

Answer each question with a clear and complete explanation.

11. Discuss the role of social security as a critical component of financial stability for retirees, and analyze its impact on their overall health and well-being.
12. Discuss the common activities undertaken by retirees, analyzing their impact on physical and mental health, and explain why home renovation may not be among these frequently named activities.

End of Paper