

Multiple Choice (10 marks)

1. What contributes to societies becoming more complex?
 - (a) Surplus food is stored in large, collective facilities.
 - (b) Crop irrigation requires the construction of dams or canals.
 - (c) Sedentary communities need to defend themselves.
 - (d) All of the above.
2. The Upper Paleolithic is generally associated with:
 - (a) new and improved stone tool technologies.
 - (b) a broadening of the subsistence base.
 - (c) larger sites with increased populations.
 - (d) all of the above.
3. Which of the following dating techniques are based on the measurement of the amount of energy trapped in materials that have been heated at archaeological sites?
 - (a) argon/argon and potassium argon dating
 - (b) archaeomagnetic and radiocarbon dating
 - (c) luminescence dating and optically stimulated luminescence
 - (d) X-ray fluorescence and paleomagnetic dating
4. Which of the following was described as "the slow agency of existing causes"?
 - (a) natural selection
 - (b) catastrophism
 - (c) uniformitarianism
 - (d) unilineal evolution
5. The origins of Chinese civilization can be traced to:
 - (a) the site of An-yang near the Huang ho River.
 - (b) chiefdoms and states in numerous regions throughout China.
 - (c) the beginning of the Qin Dynasty.
 - (d) external influences originating from the Indus Valley.

True / False (10 marks)

Answer True or False

6. True or False: The Incas fought many wars to identify and cultivate talented leaders within their society.
7. True or False: Neandertals exclusively used simple tools and did not engage in burial practices.
8. True or False: Gobekli Tepe and Poverty Point provide evidence against the idea that social complexity always required agricultural surpluses.
9. True or False: The population of the Valley of Mexico was supported by agricultural irrigation, terraces, and chinampas for farming.
10. True or False: The death of Qin Dynasty emperor Ying Zheng was marked by an enormous mortuary temple filled with gold and gems.

Long Form Response (20 marks)

Answer each question with a clear and complete explanation.

11. Discuss how the presence of deciduous dentition can provide insights into the age at which individuals lived and died in historical contexts. What implications does this have for our understanding of past societies?
12. Discuss the role and significance of the temple in early Mesopotamian society, particularly in terms of its powers and influence prior to the development of social complexity.

End of Paper